

60. Getting Along In The Old Days (0:54)

In the old days, people were just people. We just treated them all the same. You talk to them all the same.

If they were friendly with you, then you were friendly back. Didn't make any difference whether it was a woman or man or anybody. It's just that's the way you were.

I happen to do the same thing still today. If I walk on the street, I say hello to somebody and they answer me in a friendly manner - smiling and greet you and wish you a good day and all that sort of stuff - I relate to them right away.

That's what we did in the old days. Everybody seemed to want to get along pretty much.

I don't remember lots of conflict in my youth.

Related Primary Leadership Principles

Attitude

Connectivity

Decision-Making

Followership

Spirituality

Military Core Values

High Energy

Political Savvy

Caring

Information

Stress